MANCHESTER AND MILDEW

When the President of the Manchester think must come necessarily, and probably immorality and deception prevalent in the great cotton manufacture, persons outside the busy circle of that industry may be excused for believing that there is something very far wrong. This task has just been performed by Mr. Hugh Mason, of Ashton-under-Lyne, wh at present holds the honourable post to which have referred. Speaking at Manches-Mr. Mason, himself an extensive spinner, a practical philauthropist, and a man of the bighest character, made some unpleasant revelations. He began by lamenting the difficulties under which the trade now labours. The enhanced prices of raw material, the higher wages, the greater cost of coal and iron, the trouble in managing their men, bear so hard on the manufacturer that he can scarcely make both ends meet. There by the Spanish press to the German Governwas consequently a great deal of hollowness ment at the beginning of the present year. ### Extracts.

OCTOBER. There comes a month in the weary year-A month of beauty and healthful rest-When the ripe leaves full and the air is clear-October, the brown, the orisp, the blest. My life has little enough of blise;

I drag the days of the odd eleven, Counting the time that shall lead to this-The month that opens the hunter's heaven. And oh! for the mornings crisp and white, With the sweep of the bounds upon the track; The bark-roofed cabin, the camp fire's light, The break of the deer, and the rifle's crack. Do you call this trifling? I tell you, friend,

A life in the forest is past all praise; Give me a dozen such months on end-You may take my balance of years and days. For brick and mortar breed filth and crime, And a pulse of exil that throbs and beats; And men grow withered before their prime, With the course paved in ou the lanes and

And lungs are choked, and shoulders are bowed. In the smothering reck of mill and mine: 'And Death stalks in on the struggling crowd, But he shans the shadow of oak and pine. And, of all to which the memory clings. There is naught so sweet as the sunny spots Where our shanties stood by the crystal springs;

DEATH AMONG THE MOSQUITO

The vanished hounds, and the lucky shots,

When a person dies, they bury along with the hody a calabash and various other implements, and erect over the grave a little hut, which is always kept in repair. Here are also deposited from time to time-various little offerings, such as a vard or two of cloth, a bottle of rum, &c. Like the northern Indians, they also have the custom of destroying all perperty belonging to the deceased even cutting down his fruit-trees; and no greater offence can be given than to mention _the name of the dead. The women at the season of mourning out off their long-tresses. dash themselves on the ground until they are covered with blood, cast themselves into the river, or the fire, and not unfrequently in the depth of their grief will go into the dark recesses of the wood and hang themselves .--Cussell's Book of the Races of Mankind.

A PIOUS GENERAL. Immediately on gaining the opposite bank, Mackay formed the troops in two divisions: in person he led one to the right; under Major-General de Tettau (of the Danes), he sent the other to the left. The ramparts begets community of advantage and happibayonet and pike. Mackay beard his Scots swearing and grumbling as they stumbled among the fallen masonry and rubbish of the shartered walls, and remiked them even amid the unroar of the assault. "My lade," said the grave old Highlander, "you are brave fellows, but do not swear. We have more reason to thank God for the goodness which He has shown to us this day than to take His name in vain." The stout-fellows of his Scots Brigade and of Hamilton's regiment now placed planks over the bridge; a line of pontoons was drawn across the river; the whole army began to cross, and with the loss of forty-two men killed and wounded-so rapidly was the movement made—the troops of King William forced their way beyond the Shannon and entered Conna "Cassell's." British Battles on Land and Sea."

BRAIN WORK.

Brain work, even hard brain-work, does not necessarily conduce to disease. If, in on any Building, or on Merchandise in the same, any given case, it is productive of this result, it will invariably be found, on investigation, that the work has been done under injurious emotional conditions, such as the distractions arising from anxiety, hurry, or the pressing sense of responsibility. Of all the organs of the body, the brain is the bardiest, the most capable of exceeding its ordinary duties with | their Contents...... impunity. Any extraordinary exertion thrown on the other organs is sooner or later emphatically resented. The quality of the brain which is most conservative of its health is its versatility. One part of the organ may be fresh, while another is jaded, and it has the power of resting in parts that are ex- | month hausted, while it continues active in those parts that are still vigorous. One of the eccrets of safe continued brain work is to vary frequently the kind of mental occupation. This is a species of mental gymnastics by which all parts of the organ of thought probably preferable to complete cessation Balanco of the Annual Premium. from mental toil. The mind cannot lie long. fallow without bringing forth weeds. Through want of employment, it becomes relaxed in tone, less amenable to discipline, and less fitted for steady work. When the present Prime Minister spent the greater part of his holiday, after the exhausting labours of a heavy session, in writing Juventus Mundi, he was the means of drawing attention to an important principle of mental therapeutics. Had he spent the same time this Agency. in continental travel, or on the Scotch moors, he might indeed have returned at the be ginning of the session equally recovered from the effects of overwork, but he would no have been equally fit to resume his parliamentary Auties. - Chamber's Journal.

THE GREEK MILITIA IN CAIRO. their arms, equally brilliant and harmless, their proud and disdainful attitudes, their least gestures, all seem to have been carefully studied. And yet nothing is more natural than the interminable Greek moustaches. which cut their faces in two, like two huge buffalo horns, and which form the most ap. propriate ornament to those fine faces bronzed by the sun. The monstache, which has nothing Arab in it, is a sign of Albanian origin among the Cairene soldiery. The Arnauts, that Greek militia brought into Egypt by Mehemet Ali in order to oppose the encroaching power of the Mamelukes, inaugurated moustaches at Cairo, and took care to compose the foreign troops' uniforms of all the richest stuffs in the country to which they came as military occupants. This was an innovation in a country where the beard is highly esteemed, and where the respect due to a man is measured by that appendage. The amateur soldier plays his party carefully, and becomes an indispensable piece of furniture at the door of a mosque, or the entrance of a palace. He is the Suisse, the chassenr of our forefathers' time; for his halberd he has a number of arms, sabres and pistols, artistically disposed in the various compartments of a vast girdle of red leather, which provide out of the earnings, first for an interest makes him look like a shop window for the dividend of 15% for shareholders on Capital, dividend of and thereafter distribute among Policy holders display of guns and swords. His pipe, his tobacco, and his food, all have their places in this walking shop front. It might fairly be asked by what feat of balancing he contrives to walk without being caught by the walls; but the street boy of London and -Paris does not flourish in Cairo, and thesely fierce warriors are safe from the derision and the tripping-up trick which would be the signal for their decadence or the destruction of their prestige. They are fully aware of their interesting and perilous position, and in order that they may not have to disarrange the arm of the museum which they carry on their stomachs, they carry immense flexible whips made of hippopotamus hide, combining the suppleness of the horsewhip with the precision of the cane, and thus they keep their enemies and their admirers at a respectful distance. This formidable whin is called a combade, and it is a sceptre of authority which obtains everything, regulates everthing, settles everything, when backwhich has become powerless in a delicate question."-From "The Fayoum ;" or.

Artists in Egypt. But Paul Lenoir.

WOMEN AS COMPANIONS. How the present sum of human wretchedness has accumulated, challenges conjecture; but that it is perpetuated by ill-assorted marriage is self-evident. If the peopling of the planet could be begun again, comparative contentment might be secured to the race by proper sexual adjustment. It is all the pleasanter to contemplate what might be, for the reason that the possibility must be hypothetical, and the deductions made to match the hue of our perceptions. Still, as mistakes arise from ignorance, and produce misery, whatever tends to prevent mistakes should be bailed with exultation. The marringe, many of us owe what we ought not to we who are born out of parallel with nature, In Goods stored therein. could have prevailed upon some of our ancestors—perhaps not very remote—to have marriage, what incalculable gainers we should have been! We are wiser than they, of course, and might have given them valuable counsel; for, if not in advance of our own, we are certainly in advance of their time. That our advice was not asked respecting their countilial intentions, is purely our mischauce But then it is the same as to our advent into being. One of the inalienable and unattainable rights of every child is to decide for itself, whether it; wants to be born or not; and the establishment of this right will be the exordium to the millennium of individuality. The close companionship of some of our forefathers and foremothers would have enhanced our contemporaneous satisfaction, or, which might have been still better, have kept us in chaos. Life in itself is not desirable, and with an unhappy temperament, and surroundings which we have not power to change, is infinitely worse than no life at all. Since we are not in a position pany at current rates, subject to a discount of to have compelled the intimate ante-matri. 20 per cent." monial acquaintance of our predecessors, we may make some repuration to ourselves by striving to insure the early introduction to one another of persons impelled to housekeeping on the co-operative plan. It is never too late to attempt reform, and the fact that there have been so many indiscreet marriages, is a new reason for labouring in the interest of sagacious ones. Over the temple of Hymen should be written, "Know Lthyself, O man, and her thou wouldst wed, ere thou enter here!" The inscription can be obeyed only through companionship, which, continued with sympathy, must reveal that mutual knowledge whereon rests the duality of content, Communion of the sexes ness, and transmits it to posterity for ever. We benefit succeeding generations more than we can tell by allying ourselves with Nature to procreative ends. The benison of congenial mating is reproduced for all time; it permeates the future as does sunshine space. descending through dimmest distance in favour and fertility. Victoria Magazine.
